Some of the most common payment methods available to you from one or more pension plan(s) for which you are eligible are described briefly below. If you would like more information about the payment methods available to you, you may make a request to have an estimate statement mailed to you by calling the Lockheed Martin Employee Service Center. Select "Contact Us" from the task bar for contact information.

Under a Life Only payment method, monthly payments end upon your death unless this payment method includes an unexpired Guarantee period or a Cash Refund.

Under a Joint and Survivor payment method, upon your death, your surviving spouse (or other designated joint annuitant) receives a monthly lifetime benefit equal to the specified percentage of your monthly benefit. A Qualified Joint and Survivor is your automatic monthly payment method if you are considered married under the rules of a qualified plan.

Under a Joint and Survivor payment method with a "Pop-Up" feature, if your spouse (or other designated joint annuitant) dies within the specified Pop-Up period, your benefit will be restored to the Life Only amount for which you would have been eligible when your benefit commenced.

Under a payment method with a "guarantee" period, if you die before the end of this period, your beneficiary(ies) will receive the remainder of the guaranteed payments.

Your actual benefit will be based on the information you provide and information in Company records at the time of your benefit commencement. Therefore, the actual benefit amounts payable to you at your Benefit Commencement Date may differ from the benefit amounts shown on your estimate. Please note, if there is any discrepancy between the information in your estimate and plan documents, the plan documents will govern.
